Your essential guide to over 150 unique year-round and summer language centres worldwide.

Founded in 1983, IALC is an award-winning association of leading language schools worldwide. We provide amazing experiences for many thousands of students annually as they travel abroad to explore other languages and cultures.

Our members are independent centres teaching the language where it is spoken. They are run by caring, accessible individuals with a passion for language education. On pages 3 to 11 of this Directory you'll find an overview of IALC activities, from our popular annual agent workshop to our groundbreaking industry research, language school accreditation and fast-growing partner agency scheme.

On pages 12 to 61, you'll find a listing for each of the language centres in IALC. Each meets the high standards of the International Association of Language Centres, described by the EL Gazette as "the closest thing to a global group of Centres of Excellence".

The annual IALC Study Travel Research Report

As an association committed to language learning and cultural exchange, we are proud to contribute research on language study abroad.

2015: Perception of independent and boutique chain schools in language travel

A comprehensive insight into the current state of the global language travel market, with a specific focus on the perception of independent schools and boutique chains.

The power of this report lies in the research sample: 472 agencies from 72 countries participated, representing a pool of more than 230,000 language travel students.

The study also analyses the programme preferences of language travel students and sheds more light on the demand for foreign languages and industry trends.

2016: Trends in the demand for foreign languages

A wide-ranging analysis of the global language travel market for nine different languages.

In total, 466 agencies from 74 countries participated, representing a pool of more than 236,000 language travel students – some 10% of the global language travel market.

The study analyses the trends in demand for Chinese,

English, French, German, Italian, Japanese, Portuguese, Russian and Spanish.

2017 and 18: The student perspective on language study abroad

In total, over 4,700 language travellers took part in the IALC Study Travel Research Report on the student perspective on language study abroad.

These are the third and fourth study travel research reports commissioned by IALC, but the first editions to focus on the end-customer.

The result is a unique piece of research on language learning that has been divided into two editions: The IALC Study Travel Research Report 2017 - The student perspective on language study abroad: Student expectations, experiences and satisfaction and the IALC Study Travel Research Report 2018 - The student perspective on language study abroad: Perfecting the student experience.

These landmark research projects identify and measure changes in pre-arrival and post-arrival preferences. They provide quantitative and qualitative information on any unexpected benefits and disappointments of language study abroad and track whether existing language knowledge or proficiency, or a previous study abroad experience, influences these preferences and ultimately, the student satisfaction.

Quality standards

A guarantee of excellence

When we look for new members, we expect not only excellent teaching and service, but also a genuine passion for language study abroad. Only then can we be confident that each language student's unique study abroad experience with IALC will be positive.

So in addition to specific requirements in various areas, we look for an attitude. IALC schools should be happy places to study, where committed directors and a motivated team give their clients the best possible experience, and where individuality and creativity exist alongside professionalism and best practice.

The inspection. We have a team of trained independent inspectors, who visit each member at least every four years. They thoroughly inspect all areas of the language school. Any improvement must be made within a set time-frame. Failure to improve as required will result in loss of membership.

The annual audit. The best language centres continuously innovate and improve themselves. We measure our members' commitment to quality development through an annual online assessment: the Annual Quality Return (AQR).

Best practice and shared knowhow. IALC is a supportive, collaborative association in which members share best practice and tips on running a great language school, both at our annual general meeting and via an online forum at any time of year.

Complaints. All IALC schools have a published complaints policy as part of their quality commitment. But if you are unable to resolve a complaint with an IALC member, you can contact IALC. We just ask that you only pursue your complaint through one association. We will investigate fairly and neutrally and recommend a resolution.

Pure quality with a strong family atmosphere is a trademark of IALC schools.”

Tereza Fulfaro, CI, Brazil.
